SITUATION SUMMARY

Hazardous Materials Release Spill 15-4277, Loon Beach Santa Barbara County

- On 7/26/15 at 0958 hours, the California State Warning Center was contacted by a private citizen reporting an unknown amount of oil covering Loon Point Beach in the city of Summerland in Santa Barbara County. The caller stated it was not there yesterday and is now covering approximately one mile of coast line. The substance has a strong oil odor and is a brown/black color. The caller stated the substance could be seen in the waves and on the beach itself. At 1341 hours the USCG reported that the USCG pollution duty officer responded to the area and concluded this was a heavy natural seepage incident. The USCG pollution duty officer advised there were no tar balls, tar patties or tar present on the beach and no samples were taken. A warden from the California Fish and Wildlife advises that after walking the entire beach a sheen was observed on the sand above the high water mark with no smell of oil to the sand. Per California Fish and Wildlife there was no affected wildlife in the area, no media interest in the area and no public interest from the public at the beach advising of the oil sheen. Per California Fish and Wildlife this area is a natural seepage site on and offshore. There is no ICP set up for this incident the only ICP is the Refugio ICP some 40 miles away. California Fish and Wildlife has cleared the scene unable to locate the reported oil release on the beach

2015 Olympics World Games July 25, 2015 - August 2, 2015, Los Angeles County

- The SREOC will remain activated at Level I, normal operational monitoring. The Territory Representative for Los Angeles County will provide support at the Los Angeles County EOC.

Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

- SOC / Inland REOC remains activated in support of 2014 Drought

Weather of Concern

Coastal Region

- Hot weather for most of the Bay Area as high pressure builds overhead. Daytime temperatures for Tuesday through Thursday will likely climb into the upper 70s and mid 80s near the coast, and into the 90s to lower 100s inland. Persons sensitive to heat such as the elderly and those on certain medications should plan accordingly and put a plan in place now to prepare for the upcoming hot weather. Some cooling may occur near the coast on Thursday and Friday, but hot weather will likely persist inland.

Inland Region

- The week ahead will start out relatively cool but warm up quickly as high pressure builds over the west coast. Breezy northerly winds will bring drying on Monday and Tuesday for increased fire danger. The warmest part of the week will occur around Wednesday and Thursday then a little cooling is in store for the end of the week. Monsoon moisture may start to move up from the south bringing a threat of mountain showers or thunderstorms to the region.

Southern Region

- Monsoonal moisture will return to Southern California by mid-week. For Wednesday through the weekend, expect a chance of mainly afternoon and evening showers and thunderstorms over the mountains and deserts. However, this precipitation could drift westward over the inland valleys and coastal region at times.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA:

A low pressure trough and front passing over the Northern California today will produce mild and breezy conditions. Winds ahead of the front will be south to southwest with gusts of 20-30 mph, and up to 30-35 mph east of the Cascade-Sierra crest. A few afternoon and evening showers will develop north of a line from Lake Shasta to Susanville. Isolated thunderstorms are also possible. Behind the trough and front, high pressure will build in and produce northwest to north winds that will become north to northeast on Monday, and northeast to east Tuesday and Wednesday. The winds will peak Monday night and Tuesday with wind-prone areas seeing gusts of 20-30 mph. Locally stronger winds can be expected in northeast to southwest channels in the foothills of the Cascade-Sierra range Monday night through early Wednesday. High pressure aloft will also be strengthening over the area next week, pushing afternoon temperatures up to 5-10 degrees above normal by Wednesday. The winds will enhance these conditions from the lower Cascade-Sierra foothills to the coast. A lighter north to east wind pattern will continue through the end of the week. It appears likely that some Southwest Desert monsoon moisture will be working its way north late in the week. Daily afternoon and evening mountain thunderstorms could begin as early as Thursday. Coming on the heels a significant warming and drying trend, this will increase the potential for dry lightning with the first storms. Thunderstorms will be producing more rainfall as the pattern continues next weekend.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

A weak Pacific trough over the West Coast will bring slight cooling to the region through Monday, with temperatures remaining in the 70s to low 80s across the mountains and mid-80s to mid-90s in the valleys. Westerly winds of 15 to 25 mph with gusts to 40 mph will continue to surface across the desert passes through tonight. Significant warming will occur Tuesday and Wednesday as strong high pressure over Texas shifts westward to the Four Corners Area. Temperatures will be near or just above 100 degrees over most valley and foothill locations by Wednesday. Minimum humidity will be mainly between 12% and 25% away from the coastal areas through Tuesday. Southeast flow aloft will bring scattered showers and thunderstorms to the mountains and deserts of Southern California starting Wednesday and to the Sierra starting Thursday. The shower and thunderstorm activity may also reach some coastal and valley locations, but most of the activity should occur over the mountains and deserts. Depending on the cloud cover, temperatures may cool a little toward the end of next week.

Lowell and Willow Fire Smoke

Late Evening- Mon AM:

West winds will bring more smoke east of the Sierra.

Monday Afternoon:

Northeast winds push areas of dense smoke west of the Sierra crest.

What should you do?

- ✓ Check local air quality conditions AirNow.gov
- ✓ Stay indoors with windows closed and A/C on if you have one
- ✓ Reduce activity and stay hydrated

Haze and smoke forecast for this afternoon and evening.
